Shelter Space Open to All; Faculty Convictions Vary

By JOHN M. JONES

Edgar M. Gemmell '34, chairman of the Princeton Gheen's Fallout Shelter Committee, emphasized yesterday that the recommendations which the committee recently submitted to the President call for any shelter space to be available to anyone at all on a first-come-first served basis.

The President appointed the committee in September to investigate the possibilities of adapting university buildings for emergency use as fallout shelters.

In the faculty dispute over a Princeton fallout shelter program, general positions are clear, but the battle is between two groups of individuals with similar convictions—those who support the closely unified political factions.

Talks with several of the leading spokesmen on both sides of the shelter issue indicated yesterday that much diversity of opinion exists both among those who support the construction program and among those who oppose it.

Last week the committee submitted a report recommending a six-month, $120,000 program which would adapt certain buildings so as to create emergency fallout shelters for approximately 6200 persons.

Faculty opinion on the fallout shelter issue is sharply split. Yesterday's interviews and recent letters in support of both viewpoints indicate that, as was true with the campus housing issue, the "cleansing" is not "deeply held" on both sides of the issues.

According to a letter by Mr. Gemmell which accompanied the committee report, the basic motivations behind the shelter recommendations are two "firmly held and well-grounded" reasons: First, that a residential university has a moral responsibility for the health and safety of its students.

Second, beyond that responsibility, in a national emergency it has "a moral obligation to share its facilities, to the extent of its capacities, with the public at large."

To this extent the members of the committee are agreed. Broader, personal arguments are called in, but not to the overall justification of fallout shelter debates.

John A. Wheeler, Princeton physics professor and a member of the committee, personally stressed the responsibility of the university to its students.

The university has, he feels, a responsibility to make its space available to others (Continued on page three).

Cloudy Weather May Delay Orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla., Feb. 12—Marginal weather in the Atlantic recovery area has cast a doubt on the possibility of launching the Mercury manned orbital flight Wednesday morning.

As of 5 p.m. today, however, spokesmen for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) remained confident that the countdown would be held to 5 a.m. tomorrow.

The question mark on the actual time of the launching is caused by forecasts of increased cloudiness, high winds and rough seas in the recovery area along part of the first orbit flight path across the Atlantic. The area lies in the vicinity of Bermuda.

Meanwhile, at Cape Canaveral, astronaut John H. Glenn, the Atlas rocket, Mercury spacecraft, worldwide tracking, orbit and recovery forces were all reported in "GO" condition.

Included in Glenn's physical examination were electrocardiograph recordings and thorough examinations of the eyes, ears, nose and throat.

The astronaut, expected back at the cape by 5 p.m., will spend the evening reviewing flight plans and other technical reports.
Shelter Controversy -- Pro

The current debate over nuclear bomb shelters involves rethinking several fundamental issues that might better have been considered before 1945. But the possibility of nuclear warfare is here to stay, at least until science comes up with something bigger and dirtier, and it is a healthy sign that we are at last starting to think about its ramifications.

The Princetonians feel, however, that the main argument of those opposing shelters—that shelters engender a false sense of security—is naive. What sense of security could there possibly be in the knowledge that nuclear war will leave men nothing but their lives?

If we contend that our government is too irresponsible to as much as think of a secondary consideration; the Princetonian would recommend, however, that a government program should be reserved for communities which cannot provide for themselves and which request such aid.

The discussion of "what would happen in the event of nuclear warfare" is not necessarily morbid and perverted. The meaning of the atomic bomb has been brought home hard by the controversy over shelters.

To argue for shelters is not to argue that nuclear warfare should be accepted as inevitable. It is to be hoped that shelters will be treated as only one aspect of the greater problems that face us.

Perhaps the shelter controversy will make the public sit up and listen to the seriousness of its predicament. Then we can start to do something more constructive about it.

THE POLITICAL SIDE

By WALTER R. SLOCOMBE

The hearings on alleged muzzling of military officers by civilian censors had the potential for some of the most spectacular Washington fireworks since the days of the late, lamented McCarthy.

The fact that the more responsible elements of government have been able to keep the inquiry from turning into a witch-hunt and that it has been conducted at a relatively low level of political contentiousness indicates the strength of traditional instruments of political power in our government.

The wiler elements among the "anti-muzzlers" have been able to keep the inquiry limited to recommending the right to comment. Secretary McNamara first refused to make censors responsible for specific changes in speeches but he justified his action by stating that "loyalty downward" required that he take full responsibility for their actions himself. Loyalty of this kind is surely needed in government, but Senator Stennis was wise in rejecting this plea and forcing McNamara back on to the traditional doctrine of Executive Privilege.

Congress has a broad right to investigate the executive departments, not least to discover incompetent or obstructive subordinates. Adoption of this loyalty downward idea (in Congressional investigations) would make it altogether too easy for the legitimate investigative functions of Congress to be hamstrung by a token "acceptance of responsibility" by some future department head less inclined than McNamara to co-operate in other ways with a proper Congressional probe.

Peace Union Presents Panel; Plans to Discuss U.N. in Congo

The Princeton Student Peace Union is sponsoring an African panel discussion tonight in Whig Hall at 8 p.m.

The topic of the discussion will be “The United Nations and the Congo.”

Included on the panel are: Professor A. A. Kwapong, a visiting lecturer from Ghana, and Willie Masururu, a Parvin fellow, nationalist editor and political party leader from Southern Rhodesia.

Also included are Lawrence Esko, a graduate of the Woodrow Wilson School, from Nigeria and Jean N. Lurweno ’62, editor of the Voice of Congolese Students of the U. S. from the Congo.

The peace group is presenting this program because we believe that the United Nations is the major instrument for world peace and freedom,” said R. Hunter Morey ’62, speaking for the Student Peace Union.

“Understanding the Congo situation has been hampered considerably by various press agents of Tshombe and related groups which have been spreading myths and confusion.

“Many colonial powers and certain interests in the United States are presently strongly campaigning against the United Nations and against the United Nations’ bond issue in our Congress.

“We believe that one of the best ways to show support for the U.N. is to find out how it works in the Congo toward a peaceful, free society,” Morey concluded.

Fallout Reverses Decision

Useful to students and to citizens.

A proponent of community shelters, he strongly disagrees with the position that any shelter program—personal, local or national—should be discarded because every one may not be able to be saved.

Arthur Mendel, chairman of the Music Department, in a fundamental disagreement with any program of fallout shelters.

He argues, as 99 other faculty members did last December in an open letter to President Kennedy, that fallout shelters are both ineffective and morally wrong.

He rejects and condemns them, however, because he feels both that they will not accomplish what is claimed for them and that their psychological effect is to make war more likely.

Boycott Advocate

The leader of a student group boycotting and picketing the Columbia University bookstore resigned from the group yesterday after apologizing to university officials.

The leader, graduate student Thomas Cranmer, remarked, “the boycott has caused more problems than it has solved.”

The boycott was started last week to protest high prices and the rejection of a request to convert the store into a cooperative.

Cranmer stated that he now felt students could “have the benefits of a cooperative” without a cooperative.

The student committee announced that picketing would cease but the boycott would continue.

College Looks Past ‘Brains,’ Pusey States

“The college is not looking simply for ‘brains’,” Harvard President Nathan M. Pusey announced in his annual report recently.

“The admitting officers have always sought and continue to seek intellectual alertness, variety of interests and talents . . . wherever such qualities can be found,” the president continued.

Harvard now follows a policy of accepting only those students who would stand in the top one percent of the country, according to Dean of Admissions Wilbur J. Bender.

Bender also stated that admissions officers sought to look for qualities beyond “test-scoring intelligence,” but that a student with a high IQ, would not necessarily lack these qualities.

Pusey praised the Class of 1964 as excelling “all its predecessors in promise.

“What this means is not that this and other recent classes are brighter at the top, but simply that the pressure of numbers has steadily pushed upward the floor of acceptability,”

The freshmen of today are better prepared and motivated than those of a decade ago according to the president.

ELIZABETHAN DRAMA SLATED FOR MCCARTER THEATRE SPRING SHOW

Elizabethan drama, with its low comedy and high tragedy, its puns, poetry, madmen and murderers, will be the subject of McCarter Theatre's spring season, which starts March 5.

The McCarter repertory company will produce five plays by late Elizabethan dramatists, Milton Lyon announced recently. The season opens with John Webster's "The Duchess of Malfi."

Shakespeare's "Macbeth" and "The Merchant of Venice" and Beaumont and Fletcher's "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" follow. The season ends in April with Ben Jonson's "The Alchemist."

Actor-Audience Relationship

Although there has been no effort to recreate the Elizabethan stage or its techniques, Brooks Jones '56, producer, said, "There has been an effort to recreate the dynamic relationship between the actor and the audience."

"By lighting the actor from four sides and extending the stage one receives the impression of a three-dimensional human being walking out of you instead of a separate world behind the Proscenium Arch," Jones continued.

In a sense the forthcoming season is a director's season. Three well-known directors have been brought in as "guest members" of the resident company.

Season of Elizabethan Drama Slated For McCarter Theatre Spring Show

Philip Minor '50 will direct "The Duchess of Malfi." Minor, the director of Shaw's "Misalliance," which is now concluding its highly successful off-Broadway run, worked with the university players several seasons ago. He is also co-director with Stuart Dunen '50 of the Sheridan Square Playhouse.

Seal to Direct

Directing "The Merchant of Venice" will be Douglas Seal, whom Jones rates as "one of the best Shakespearean directors around."

Seal has worked extensively with the Old Vic and the Stratford Festival Theatre. Seal's production of "Saint Joan" is part of the Old Vic's current New York season. Next summer he will direct "As You Like It" at Stratford, Conn.

The even Porter will direct "The Alchemist." The young director with the Association of Producing Artists Company gave McCarter his productions of "Scapin" by Moliere and Shakespeare's "King Lear" last year.

Jones commented, "Our hope is that this particular idea of guest members to the resident company will add to the value of the professional company on campus."

Jones expressed the hope that the visiting directors and the 15 resident actors would become part of the campus community and participate in the intellectual life. He noted, however, "the students don't pay a lot of attention to things close to them."

Student Attendance Increasing

"I wish we could appeal more to the student, but we can't. We have to rely on the outside community," Jones said. Nevertheless he noted that student attendance has been increasing.

The repertory season, the second season of repertory drama at McCarter, will begin February 19 with a preview performance of "Macbeth," directed by Lyon.

All the pre-season performances are matinees which will be attended by students from near-by high schools. The pre-season matinees roughly correspond to out-of-town try-outs of the Broadway plays.

Jones said that the younger audiences are usually "more critical" than the evening crowds at McCarter.

Jones continued by saying that he hoped that the success of the student matinees would continue.

THE MANY LOVES OF THORWALD DOKSTADER

When Thorwald Dokstadter—sophomore, epicure, and sportsman—first took up smoking, he did not simply choose the first brand of cigarettes that came to hand. He did what any sophomore, epicure, and sportsman would do: he sampled several brands.

The first brand he tried—"a rich, mild, delicately flavored cigarette"—was a huge pack of cigarettes. But the student lit and inhaled, and—sensing that the cigarette was a large lie—a rich, mild, flavorless cigarette, he immediately put it out and would not smoke another.

Similarly, when Thorwald took up girls, he did not simply select the first one who came along. He sampled. First he dated an English literature major named Elizabeth Barrett Schwarts, a waitress at a large, luminous eyes and a soul that shimmered with a pale, unearthly beauty. Trippingly, trippingly, she walked with Thorwald upon the beach and out with him behind a windward dune and listened to a conch shell and sighed sweetly and took out a little gold pencil and a little morocco notebook and wrote a little poem:

I will set by the shore, I will be a dreamer, I will feel the sea once more... Pounding my fingers...

Thorwald's second date was with a physical education major named Peaches Glendower, a broth of a girl with a ready smile and a size 18 neck. She took Thorwald down to the cinder track where they did 100 laps to open the pores. Then they played four games of squash, six sets of tennis, 36 holes of golf, nine innings of one o'cat, six chukkers of lacrosse, and a mile and a quarter of leapfrog. Then they went tea round with eight excersize. They had had enough of washing and exchanged a firm handshake and went home to their respective whirlpool baths.

Thorwald's final date was with a golden-haired,ouncy-brown, green-eyed, red-lipped, fully-scaled girl named Totsi Sigafous. Totsi was not majoring in anything. As she often said, "Gee whillikers, what's college for anyhow—to fill your head full of silly old facts, or to discover the shining essence that is YOU?"

Totsi started the evening with Thorwald at a luxurious restaurant where she consumed her own weight in Cornish rock hen. From there they went to a deluxe movie palace where Totsi had popcorn with butter. Then she had a bag of chocolate covered raisins—also with butter. Then they went to a costly bathroom and did the Twist till dawn, tipping the band every eighth bar. Then they went to a Chinese restaurant where Totsi, unable to translate the menu, solved her problem by ordering one of everything. Then Thorwald took her to the women's dorm, boosted her in the window, and went downtown to wait for the employment office to open.

While awaiting, Thorwald thought over all his girls and came to a sensible decision. "I think," he said to himself, "that I will stick with Marlboros. I am not rich enough for girls."
Freshman Sextets Defeats West Haven

BY CHARLES CRESLY
Princeton's 5-2 win over a weak West Haven team put down two high school sextets last weekend, defeating West Haven Friday night, 5-1, and Hamden Saturday, 4-2.

Coach Peter Cook, encouraged by the win, said that the Tigers now have an "even chance" against Harvard next Saturday. The coach also cited the yearlings for their "solid teamwork and steady defense."

West Haven's Tom Hilderbrand slipped through the Bengal 11 in the first period to score the first goal of the Friday night contest. The Tigers fought back hard and led the edge for the rest of the game, but were unable to pierce West Haven's defense until 2:21 in the third period.

Then Bob Clarke took a pass from Jim Crane and slapped it into the cage to tie the score. Two minutes later, Stony Stollenwerk fed the puck to George Crozier, who shot the winning goal.

The Bengals jumped to an early lead against Hamden, with three goals in the first half of the first period, two by Stollenwerk and one by Clarke.

During the second period the Tigers continued to outplay their rivals, but were held scoreless by the brilliant goal tending of Hamden's Mike Johnson, who made 10 saves.

In the final period Crozier and George Hall teamed up for the last Bengal goal. Hamden's Chuck Peterson scored their second and final tally at 10:09.

Hall, who had three assists for the game, was the spark plug of the Tiger offense. Dave Gamble and Farley Jones, as usual, turned in a consistent defensive performance.

The yearlings have a warm-up match against Lawrenceville, when they crushed 12-5 in their first encounter, Wednesday, before the big game against Harvard Saturday.

Spahn Passes Campbell in Ivy Race

against Columbia. Spahn kept up his hot pace, however, tallying 27 points against Yale to open up his 13 point margin over Campbell.

Neither Cornell nor Yale had an easy time cementing their first-place position. The Elis were down by eight points at halftime against Harvard before roaring to a 77-68 triumph. At Dartmouth an outstanding defensive job by Rick Ramsak held Spahn to seven points in the first half. The Big Green pointmaker went on to sink 13 for 13 from the foul line, part of his 27 point output, but Yale won handily, 85-72.

After the 45-43 squeaker over Princeton, Cornell defeated depthless Penn with a late rush, 60-50. With the score tied 41-41 with four minutes to go, Quakers Rob Purdy and Joe Andrews fouled out. The Big Red then went on a nine point tear to ice the contest.

The NCAAs latest statistics reveal that Princeton holds down the fourteenth slot nationally in free throw percentage. The Tigers have hit for 78.9 percent of their foul shots.

In team rebounding, Cornell, led by Gerry Kruhmbel, placed second in the NCAA. The Big Red has recovered 61.4 percent of the rebounds in their games.

Spahn is the only Ivy League player listed among the top 50 scorers. Spahn's 23.0 ppg put him 36th in the national standings.

Rob Purdy, Penn's deadly foul shooter, is eighth with an 868 percentage. He has sunk 66 of 76 attempts.

Frosh Swimmers Downed by Army;
2 Records Broken

A hard-driving freshman swimming team failed to overcome the swimmers of the Red and Blue Point at Point Pleasant, losing 42-53.

The contest was close all the way with the score at 45-43 in favor of Army with just the 440-yard freestyle relay remaining.

Army, using its relay strength, managed to win, setting a new plebe record of 3:20. The Tigers also set a new Princeton record of 3:54.8 in the same event.

The Tiger 400-yard medley relay team (Cy Hornsby, Greg Buckley, Kent Mast, Al Brasell) was able to win, setting a new Princeton record of 3:54.8 in the same event.

The strong Army team spent the night breaking records and finished by setting four new marks.

The frosh swimmers face Lawrenceville tomorrow night at the Lawrenceville pool.

Coach Mickey Vogt said, "I'll be another tough meet. In fact, all of the remaining contests will be difficult, especially Yale and Harvard."

Tiger Wrestling Team
Draws Strong Bruins
In Third League Tilt

Brutus heavyweight Bill Wood pinned Jim Rockenbach midway through the third period to knot Princeton's varsity wrestling team at 1-1 and one win this season.

Three pins and a victory and a tie by, 20-20 and hand its first tie against four defeats and one win this season.

Princeton's Mike Core, wrestling the 130-lb. class, ran up against Brown star Ken Linker, who held a comfortable 3-1 lead before pinning early in the first period.

Tiger Tom Stessel wrestled evenly with 137-pounder Rudy Roneski for two and a half periods, trailing only 4-3 when he was pinned.

One-decisioned Jim Leach turned the tide at 147-lbs., scoring a quick second period fall. Teammates Ted Nation, Rick Eckler and Woody Hess, both of the Tigers ahead, with Nation shutting out his opponent and Eckler and Hess scoring pins. The fourth point of the day was the 1-1 tie between Princeton's Al Swenson and Brown's highly-touted Charles Getz, both grapplers engineered an escape but no more.

Described as somewhat of an "in-and-out" escape specialist, Swenson, 150-lb. weight and wrestling experience.

After a scoreless first period, Wood engineered a successful escape against Rockenbach's escape to lead only 2-1 going into the final frame, but took advantage of an "unfortunate" six-out of position, and got the better Tiger near the center of the mat.

Yale, Cornell Vie For Loop Crown In Close Ivy Race

The stark reality of a strictly Yale-Cornell race for the Ivy baseball title was the chief result of this weekend's conference activity.

Both surprising squads swept their two games and drew off from the rest of the pack. Both are 7-1 in the Ivy loop, with Penn 6-3 and fourth-place Princeton, trying to shake off two heart-breaking losses to the leaders, stands at 4-4.

With the Tigers now three games behind the co-leaders and a game behind Penn, it would require several upsets by tailenders Brown, Columbia, Dartmouth and Harvard to enable Princeton to pull up into contention. Yale and Cornell should still meet in a two-game series.

A Final-Period Duel

The following evening Campbell regained his form, hitting for 17 points. Spahn trailed by 13.

Spahn Doesn't Stop

While Spahn was collared by Cornell's Ray Setchi and held to nine points, Spahn bombed for 19 against Brown in a losing effort.

The following evening Campbell regained his form, hitting for 17 points. Spahn trailed by 13.

First Loss of Season

Racquetmen Lose to Harvard

Another Princeton athletic team dropped from the ranks of the undefeated last Friday when the squash team lost to Harvard by a score of 6-3.

"I guess they just had some better squash players," said Coach John Concroy about the match.

The loss was a disappointing one, but Concroy had expected all along that Harvard might win. The Crimson squad had a strong team with especially good players at the higher weights.

Two low-five-game matches provided the margin that Harvard needed to win. Hattie McGuire lost for the first time this year to Harvard's Paul Sullivan 15-13, 6-10, 15-7, 15-11.

Hilton Smith dropped a heartbreaker when, after winning the first two games, he lost the last three to fall five points extra to Walter Conroy who observed that the "boys were pretty nervous playing in the big gym." Harvard has two new squash courts designed to accommodate large crowds.

The sting of the Harvard defeat was softened by expectations expected win, 8-1, over M.I.T. also on Friday.

Conroy was surprised that Princeton lost even one match against the Engineers.

In another squash development over the weekend Princeton captain Jim Ziegler advanced to the semi-finals of the National Squash Championships held in Buffalo on Saturday and Sunday.

On his way to the semi, Ziegler beat Steve Vanlandingham, captain of last year's squash team.

Sonny Howe, older brother of Yale's ace squash player John Sande, put Ziegler out in a grueling five game match that could have gone in either direction.

High-Scoring Duo Guides Yearlings to 7-1 Season Log

BY TYLER DANN

Friday night against Seton Hall a pair of Princeton,Two Horseshoers claimed 75 per cent of the Princeton scoring in an overtime win.

Bill Bradly, and Chuck Berling, who scored 31 and 33 points respectively, have been leading the Princeton contingent to its present 7-1 record.

Bradley has maintained a 10.6 average and Berling has scored 18 points a game. Even more impressive are Bradley's 53.4 per cent and Berling's 47.8 per cent shooting percentages.

Bradley, a 6-5 forward, played four years of high school basketball at Crystal City High School in Crystal City, Missouri and scored 3,006 points during the span to establish a Missouri state scoring record. In addition to being All-State for two years he was elected to Parade and Scholastic Coach magazines' All-American teams two years in a row.

During his senior high school career, Bill was elected president of the school and went on to become President of the Missouri Association of Student Councils.

Bradley feels his best shot is his jump shot. He says, "It's a shot I have to have and you practice the most."

An All-Around Player

However, Bradley, despite his high scoring average, is an all-around player. He has been pulling down 20 rebounds a game and averaging 10 assists.

He is a quick player for his size and he often leads fast breaks and does a lot of driving.

To get his 31 for the season Bill practiced 24 hours a day during the fall. He played one-on-one with Pete Campbell, who, according to Bradley, "has a good lead in the series."

Bradley hopes to enter the Woodrow Wilson Political Department. He also intends to play baseball in the spring.

Berling, a 6-2 forward, played high school basketball for Garden Grove High School in Garden Grove, California.

He was first string for three years and was named All-Basketball League his last two years.

Berling also feels that the jump shot is his most effective weapon.

Berling feels confidence builds the top-notch player. He says, "No matter how long you practice you can't win without confidence."

Berling started playing in the fourth grade in an industrial league in Indianapolis, Indiana.

He played junior high ball at Ta-

Fencers Third in Loop; Frosh Down Penn, 20-7

BY JOHN M. JONES

Princeton's varsity swordsmen climbed into third place in the Ivy League Saturday by downing the University of Pennsylvania, 15-12, in Dillon Gym.

Meanwhile, the frosh were cutting Penn's freshmen to ribbons in a rout that ended Princeton 20-7.

Turning in its most impressive performance of the season, the varsity saber team captured all nine of its bouts.

Commented Coach Stan Sieja, "Everything we did Saturday in the saber was right. We fenced much better than we ever did before." Captain John Sands tossed his three bouts while giving up only three touches. Consistently strong win, John Grady won three equally decisive victories.

George Van Der Aue and Paul Pretzly cut down one and two bouts, respectively, to complete the tally.

Penn edged the epee unit 5-4.
